

List of George Floyd protests

This is a list of protests and unrest related to the killing of George Floyd. The protests began in Minneapolis on May 26, 2020, a day after George Floyd, an African-American man, died during a police arrest, and they continued through the following weekend.

The protests spread to over four hundred cities and towns in all fifty states as well as in other countries, with demonstrators supporting those seeking justice for Floyd and the Black Lives Matter movement, and speaking out against police brutality. Some of the protests turned into riots with violence and property destruction. Cities with major protests included Atlanta, Auckland, Austin, Boston, Charlotte, Columbus, Denver, Detroit, Fort Lauderdale, Grand Rapids, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, Montreal, New York City, Oakland, Phoenix, Portland, Oregon, Paris, Richmond, San Antonio, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, San Jose, Seattle, Toronto, and Washington, D.C.^{[1][2][3]}

The wave of protests has been compared to the long, hot summer of 1967 and King assassination riots, both of which saw riots in over a hundred cities across the United States.^[4]

- Auburn: Hundreds of demonstrators held a largely peaceful protest on May 31 in downtown Auburn at Toomer's Corner.^[5]
- Birmingham: An estimated 1,000 people gathered on May 30 for a rally and march.^[6]
- Dothan: On May 31, a large crowd gathered peacefully at the Houston County Courthouse, holding signs, chanting, and listening to speakers.^[7]
- Hoover: At least 100 protesters attended a march along U.S. Route 31 to the Hoover Municipal complex on May 30; 20 people were arrested.^[6]
- Huntsville: Protesters marched through downtown on May 30.^[6] On June 1, a protest began at 3:00 pm with speakers, music and an eight-minute moment of silence at the Madison County Courthouse. The white mayor and a black city councilman asked people to "protest responsibly and peacefully." The mayor "took a knee" and begged the protesters to leave in a responsible manner. The protest officially ended at 8:00 p.m., but some refused to leave the area. An activist leader replied, "It's not about black response. It's about privilege response." Police fired tear gas to disperse the crowd.^[8]
- Jacksonville: A group protested downtown on June 1.^[9]
- Mobile: On May 31, a march starting at Mardi Gras Park looped around the city and returned to the park. A part of the group attempted to block I-10, but they were stopped by police, who blocked the road themselves and later dispersed the crowd with tear gas. A police van window was smashed, but a public safety director distributed his phone number asking them to express their concerns.^{[10][11][12]}
- Montgomery: Hundreds of people protested on the steps of the Alabama State Capitol on May 30.^[13]
- Opelika: A crowd protested downtown on May 30.^[14]
- Troy: About 50 people demonstrated peacefully on May 29 at the square in downtown Troy.^{[15][16]}

Alaska

- Anchorage: Two peaceful demonstrations were held on May 30. A march, organized by a high school student via Instagram, began at Town Square. About a hundred protestors marched for about 45 minutes while chanting and holding signs.^[17] A rally, organized separately and attended by hundreds of people, took place in midtown where pastors and community activists spoke in solidarity for justice.^{[18][17]}

- Fairbanks: On May 30 over 400 peaceful protestors took part in a rally and march from Veteran's Memorial Park to Golden Heart Plaza organized by the Fairbanks NAACP and the statewide group Native Movement.^[19]
- Juneau: About 250 peaceful protestors attended what was planned to be a silent vigil. The protestors sang and chanted, standing in solidarity with other protests occurring throughout the country.^[20]

Arizona

Due to the violence that occurred during the protests in Phoenix and Tucson, Arizona governor Doug Ducey declared a state of emergency on May 31. The state of emergency declaration included an 8 pm curfew statewide banning all travel, other than first responders and people driving to and from work or to receive medical attention from 8 pm to 5 am. He also deployed the National Guard.^[21]

- Flagstaff: On Friday, May 29, approximately 100 protesters gathered at Flagstaff City Hall, then marched to Heritage Square and back.^[22] Similar protests occurred on Saturday, May 30.^[23]
- Phoenix: Phoenix saw demonstrations for four straight nights. Hundreds protested on May 28, with the police using pepper spray and tear gas.^[24] Protesters allegedly destroyed windows and doors to the Arizona Federal Theater and a City of Phoenix government building, as well as several other municipal and private businesses and parked cars. Some lit fireworks and fired shots into the air.^{[25][26]} On May 29 a separate vigil was held outside the Arizona Department of Public Safety in honor of Dion Johnson, a 28-year-old man who was shot and killed by a DPS trooper on May 25.^[27] Protests continued for three more nights.^[28]
- Prescott: More than 150 protesters demonstrated in front of the Prescott Valley Police Department.^[29] Minor skirmishes with a pro-law enforcement group was reported on May 30.^[30]
- Scottsdale: Hundreds of people protested downtown.^[31] Rioters caused millions in damage to the Scottsdale Fashion Square area and 12 arrests were made.^[31] No officers were injured.^[31]
- Tucson: Hundreds of protesters protested in downtown Tucson on May 30. The protests included multiple downtown businesses' windows being broken as well as a dumpster being set on fire. By the end of the protest, protesters peacefully stood in front of police, who were in full riot gear.^[32] It was estimated that rioters caused more than US$200,000 of damage, and at least four arrests were made. Tucson Chief of Police, Chris Magnus, said that many of the people who incited the violence, were not from the area.^[33] The following night, more protests occurred. The protest began downtown, and eventually made its way to the University of Arizona campus, where police appeared to push into the crowd of protesters. Eight people were arrested during the second night of protests.^[34]
- Yuma: On May 30, over 150 activists displayed signs at a busy intersection and chanted "I Can't Breathe".^[35]

Arkansas

- Bentonville: On June 1, protesters gathered at the Bentonville Town Square; the protest was originally postponed from the original date after receiving online threats, however, nearly a hundred residents still showed up to protest. The Bentonville Police Department began releasing tear gas and firing beanbag rounds at the protesters after reportedly being struck by water bottles and having "threatening language" thrown their way in the form of "fuck the police".^[36]
- Conway: On May 31, protestors in Conway marched from downtown Conway towards the Faulkner County Courthouse. The protests eventually spilled onto Interstate 40 at the exit on Oak Street. Authorities made arrests and used tear gas to remove protestors from the interstate. Protestors largely remained on Oak Street close to the interstate for the remainder of the night.^[37]

- Fayetteville: Dozens of protesters demonstrated peacefully at the corner of College Avenue and Lafayette Street from 1 to 6 p.m. on May 30.^[38]
- Fort Smith: Hundreds of protesters were on Rogers Avenue and Garrison Avenue May 31, 2020.^{[39][40]}
- Jonesboro: On May 31st and June 1st, hundreds of protesters demonstrated in Jonesboro, shutting down roads.^{[41][42][43]}
- Little Rock: On May 30 about 400 to 500 people took part in a peaceful protest on the steps of the Arkansas State Capitol.^[44] During the evening, protesters clashed with police as protesters shot fireworks at police, police fired tear gas at protesters, some windows were broken in businesses across the street, and Interstate 630 was briefly blocked on two occasions.^[45] A new mural was also added on West 7th Street.^[46]
- Texarkana: On Saturday afternoon, May 30, 70 to 100 protesters gathered peacefully at the State Line Post Office to listen to speeches, then marched to downtown before returning northward to a parking lot at State Line and Arkansas Boulevard, where the crowd grew and passing motorists honked in support.^[47] (Note: this entry is also listed in the Texas section below.)

California

Colorado

- Aspen: Dozens of residents attended a candle-light vigil on May 30. Participants repeated the words "I can't breathe" for nine minutes, the length of time that Derek Chavin's knee was on George Floyd's neck.^[48]
- Boulder: About 50 people organized a modified sit-in style protest where demonstrators peacefully took a knee for one hour on May 29.^[49] Hundreds walked three miles through a "Boulder in Solidarity" march on May 30.^[50]
- Colorado Springs: About 300 protesters demonstrated by lying on their stomachs in front of City Hall on May 30. Dozens were arrested on May 30.^[51] More protests took place on May 31.^{[52][53]}
- Denver: On May 28, protesters marched for four hours, blocking traffic on Interstate 25 and demonstrating at the Colorado State Capitol.^[54] Multiple gunshots were fired there, and police also fired rubber bullets and shot gas canisters at the crowd.^[55] Several properties were damaged. Some protesters also crowded onto 16th Street Mall and toward Interstate 25 via 20th Street and blocked traffic.^[56] One video appears to show a vehicle intentionally hitting a protester who had gotten onto the hood of the car. It is not clear what occurred before this—according to the woman who filmed the incident, the man jumped on top of the vehicle before she began filming.^[57] Three police officers were injured in clashes with protesters, one of whom had to go to a hospital. Protests continued throughout the city over the next three days, with protests generally being peaceful during the day followed by more violent clashes between protesters and police later in the evenings.^[58] On May 30, Mayor Michael Hancock implemented a citywide curfew from 8:00 p.m. to 5:00 a.m.^[59] By the evening of May 31, the Denver Police Department had arrested over 120 people during the protests over the past four days.^{[58][60]} On June 2, The Denver Police Department announced the arrest of a man suspected to be the perpetrator behind the vehicular attack of three police which left one officer with a fractured leg and the other two with a "substantial risk of protracted loss or impairment of the function of any part or organ of the body."^[61] A fifth night of protests in Denver remained more peaceful on Monday night, 1 June, after the previous four nights had seen riotous behavior among smaller elements of the much larger protest gathering.^{[62][63]}
- Fort Collins: About 100 protesters chanted "No Justice, No Peace!" the Fort Collins Police Services headquarters on May 28.^[64] On June 1, about 150 protesters gathered at the same place while about

10 people attended a vigil at Civic Center Park.^[65]

- Coral Gables: About 100 people participated in a protest on May 30 that was coordinated with the local police department.^[103] The protest had sparked controversy because people have said it was not led by blacks and that police officers had been invited to participate.^[104]
- Coral Springs: The CSPD said in an announcement on May 31 that said that protesters would most likely target Coral Springs, Parkland, Lauderhill, Pompano Beach, West Ft Lauderdale, Davie, and Weston due to the majority white population. On May 31, over 50 protestors marched down Atlantic Boulevard. A police officer from CSPD was suspended on May 30 for kicking a black man in the stomach. Some 30 Protestors were at the intersection of Sample Road and University Drive. A peaceful protest at the same intersection, which was organized by 2 Pakistani students in the area, occurred with a mob of 300-500, with the mayor, multiple CSPD, and the mayor of Parkland in attendance. The national guard, once again, was deployed.
- On May 31, Fort Lauderdale announced a three-day curfew.^[102]
- Lake Worth Beach: On May 30, a peaceful protest of a few hundred people took place throughout Lake Worth by the City Hall. The gathering was peaceful for the exception of an American flag being ripped down from a flagpole.^[105]
- Miami-Dade County: On May 30, about 400 to 500 people protested downtown; protests began peacefully, and as of 7 PM on May 30, no arrests had been made.^[103] However, one demonstration quickly turned violent as a large group of protesters began looting the Bayside Marketplace later into the night,^[106] leading Miami-Dade mayor Carlos A. Giménez to order a local state of emergency and a 10 p.m. curfew for 7 days. On May 31, the curfew was extended until further notice. Beaches are closed.^[102]

- Palm Beach (town): On May 31, the Palm Beach Police Department issued warnings to residents as the protestors moved around in the area, and Mar-A-Lago, the President's retreat, was placed in shutdown.^[107]
- Sunrise: On June 2, a peaceful protest began on Southwest 136th Avenue near the BB&T Center.^[108] Several hundred protestors progressed onto Flamingo Road, Sunrise Boulevard, Hiatus Road, and Oakland Park Boulevard.^[109] Sawgrass Mills was closed early to the public.^[108]
- West Palm Beach: Several hundred protestors gathered in downtown West Palm Beach early Sunday evening May 31. The protest eventually turned into a march by 6:30 PM that shut down I-95 in both directions, and were briefly joined by law enforcement agencies. By 7:45 PM, most demonstrators were off the interstate highway, which reopened at 8:25 PM. Also on May 31, West Palm Beach Police engaged in a tense standoff with protestors in the downtown area. A curfew was placed for 9 PM to 6 AM in order to disperse the crowds by 9:30 PM. After this, crowds began to vandalize the Palm Beach County courthouse and stores in the Palm Beach Outlets, resulting in the destruction of a Geek Squad van via arson;^[107] six arrests were made, three were from West Palm Beach, one from Lake Worth Beach, and one from Deerfield Beach.^[110] On social media, people have stated that the gathering turned violent when the 9 PM curfew was enacted^[111] at 8:56 PM, four minutes prior to its enforcement.^[112] At 11 PM, parts of Palm Beach and West Palm Beach remained closed.^[107]

Georgia

Governor Brian Kemp announced on May 31 that he had authorized 3,000 National Guard troops ready to be deployed to cities across the state.^[113]

- Albany: On Saturday, May 30, about 40 or 50 protesters peaceably demonstrated with signs and chants, lining up along Slappey Boulevard on a vacant lot where they were joined by local officials and supplied with bottled water by Albany police.^[114]
- Atlanta: A peaceful march occurred on May 29 at Centennial Olympic Park and was attended by hundreds. At around 6:00 p.m., protesters marched to the CNN Center, which was then vandalized by protesters starting at around 7:00 p.m. Specifically, some protesters vandalized the CNN logo outside its offices, broke the building's glass, and entered the center at around 9:00 p.m. and destroyed its interior.^[115] As tensions between protesters and police escalated, police began using tear gas on protesters. Protesters threw water bottles, eggs, and other objects at officers, burned police cars, and defaced businesses. The College Football Hall of Fame's gift shop was looted; Hall of Fame CEO Kimberly Beaudin told ESPN that "no artifacts or displays were damaged."^[116] Three officers were injured in the clashes, including one who was run over by an ATV.^{[117][118]} At midnight, Governor Brian Kemp declared a state of emergency in Fulton County and authorized 500 National Guard members to aid law enforcement in the city.^[119] Local black leaders, including Mayor Keisha Lance Bottoms and rapper and activist Killer Mike, decried the riots.^[120] As of Saturday at 5:30, 71 arrests had been

Military police in the Georgia Army National Guard at a protest in Atlanta on May 30

Stadium looted. Six people were arrested by police.^[553] Two hundred protestors gathered at Arlington City Hall on Tuesday, June 2.^[554]

- Austin: Protesters demonstrated in downtown Austin on Friday night; police arrested at least nine people.^[555] On May 30 thousands of protestors gathered outside Austin Police Department's headquarters. They then climbed on to I-35, stopping traffic on both sides.^[556] Demonstrators in Austin were also protesting over the killing of Mike Ramos on April 24, 2020, by Austin police officers.^[557] On May 29, Travis County District Attorney Margaret Moore announced that the shooting will go to a grand jury.
- Corpus Christi: Hundreds of people protested outside the City Hall building and marched their way towards downtown Corpus Christi on May 31.^[558]
- Dallas: Almost a thousand people protested in front of the Dallas Police Headquarters.^[559] The gathering and march organized was by the Next Generation Action Network. On the night of May 29, some demonstrators broke windows, looted businesses, set fires to dumpsters, trash cans, and patrol cars. Several police cruisers were damaged in the Deep Ellum neighborhood and downtown Dallas. One group of protesters then walked onto the freeway and blocked traffic on Interstate 35, shutting down traffic and torching a parked car. A man with a machete was badly injured by a mob. Video shows the man being beaten by 10-15 men. Objects used in the attack included a skateboard and several medium-sized rocks.^{[560][561][562]} Mayor Eric Johnson said that while the protests were largely respectful, the looting and destruction of property could not be allowed.^[563]
- El Paso: On the night of May 29, the headquarters of the El Paso Police Department on Raynor Street was vandalized with graffiti reading "RIP George Floyd" and "No Justice No Peace".^[564] Two days later, on the night of Sunday, May 31, hundreds of protestors gathered in Memorial Park and knelt for an eight-minute moment of silence before marching to the El Paso Police Department.^[565] El Paso Police had asked on Twitter for "the public's support in making this a peaceful assembly as a tribute and in honor of Mr. George Floyd", and El Paso native Khalid encouraged the public to stay safe.^[566]
- Fort Worth: Community activists marched from the historic Tarrant County Courthouse to the Fort Worth Convention Center without incident on May 29.^[567] About 200 peaceful protestors gathered downtown on May 30.^{[568][569]}
- Frisco: Hundreds of protestors attended a rally on June 1st against police brutality, including the city's mayor and police chief.^[570]
- Houston: Large numbers protested in George Floyd's hometown. Mayor Sylvester Turner made calls for unity and peace.^[571] Over 200 people were arrested, most with obstructing a roadway.^[25] According to police reports four officers suffered minor injuries and eight police vehicles were damaged.^[25] Houston police stated that they were investigating a video that appeared to show a female protester being trampled by a police officer on a horse.^{[572][573]} On Tuesday, June 2, thousands of people gathered for a march and rally in downtown Houston. ^[574] Family members of George Floyd joined the march, which one source estimated at 60,000 people.^[575]

group, stood guard in front of the Alamo and the adjacent Alamo Cenotaph memorial.^[580] The initially peaceful protests later erupted into riots, with police firing rubber bullets and deploying tear gas in order to disperse crowds; several businesses and city sites were damaged, resulting in the arrests of three San Antonio residents and one resident of nearby Uvalde.^[581] Three officers were reported injured following the protests.^[582]

- Texarkana: On Saturday afternoon, May 30, 70 to 100 protesters gathered peacefully at the State Line Post Office to listen to speeches, then marched to downtown before returning northward to a parking lot at State Line and Arkansas Boulevard, where the crowd grew and passing motorists honked in support.^[47] (Note: this entry is also listed in the Arkansas section above.)

Utah

- Ogden: Around 1,000 people attended the "Take a Knee" protest in front of the Ogden City Municipal Building after turnout was only expected to reach 70 to 200; police barricaded numerous streets due to this higher-than-anticipated turnout. It was largely peaceful, with protestors opting to utilize verbal chants and speeches rather than violence. After the conclusion of the protest, protestors shook hands with police officers.^[583]
- Provo: A small car caravan organized by Utah County Against Police Brutality raised awareness on May 30 for George Floyd and Bernardo Palacios who was killed by Salt Lake City Police on May 23.^[584] Later that afternoon evening, between "dozens"^[585] and "hundreds"^[586] of protesters demonstrated in front of the Provo Police Department building downtown.^[586]
- Salt Lake City: On Friday, around 150 to 200 people protested downtown at 900 South and State Street.^[587] On Saturday, downtown was packed as hundreds drove and marched peacefully from the Salt Lake City police headquarters to the state capitol on capitol hill, where about a thousand people gathered.^{[588][589]} Protesters sprayed graffiti on parts of the Utah State Capitol Building. The protests downtown later turned violent as protesters overturned a SLCPD police cruiser and set it ablaze. Far-right extremist groups arrived carrying firearms.^[588] A man who identified himself as Brandon McCormick drove his vehicle into the crowd and aimed a bow and arrow at protesters, reportedly fired off an arrow, after responding to a stranger who asked him if he calls himself an American with: "Yes, I'm American. All lives matter."^{[590][591]} This prompted other protesters to tackle him to the ground and overturn his car, which caught on fire. An elderly man with a cane who was standing on a sidewalk was knocked to the ground by a police officer in riot gear.^[590] Governor Gary Herbert activated the National Guard, deploying 200 soldiers and a Black Hawk helicopter.^[592] Mayor Erin Mendenhall was on board the military helicopter and imposed the city's first citywide curfew^[593] from Saturday night to Monday morning. Police from thirteen other cities and from the county sheriff were brought into Salt Lake City, using a high school as a staging area. Highway patrol troopers and U.S. marshals were stationed at capitol hill. Police used armored vehicles and tear gas and fired rubber bullets at protesters.^{[588][589]} All the graffiti at the capitol was removed as the curfew continued through Sunday. After it lifted on Monday, troops and military vehicles continued to be stationed at several locations downtown.^[594] Hundreds gathered for a largely peaceful protest at the police headquarters. Mendenhall issued another curfew order, this time only at night times but lasting a week. Herbert declared an emergency closing the capitol to the public, and the capitol remained under heavy guard.^[593]
