One day after former President Barack Obama called on Americans to “a president, a Congress, a U.S. Justice Department, and a federal judiciary that actually recognize the ongoing, corrosive role that racism plays in our society and want to do something about it,” his predecessor, George W. Bush has weighed in on the death of George Floyd and racism in America with an open letter posted to social media.

“Laura and I are anguished by the brutal suffocation of George Floyd,” Bush began before saying he was reluctant to speak out.

“It remains a shocking failure that many African Americans, especially young African American men, are harassed and threatened in their own country,” continued the former president.

Bush then stated that protests are “a strength” of America, before offering criticism of those opposing them.

“Those who set out to silence those voices do not understand the meaning of America,” said the president, “or how it becomes a better place.”

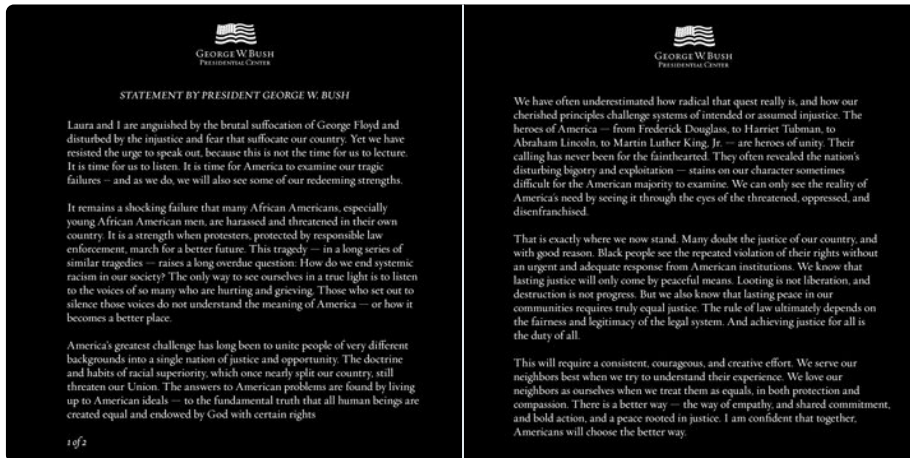

“America’s greatest challenge,” Bush continued, “has long been to unite people of very different backgrounds into a single nation of justice and opportunity. The doctrine and habits of racial superiority, which once nearly split our country, still threaten our Union. The answers to American problems are found by living up to American ideals.”

Bush's full statement is below.

Statement by President George W. Bush:

Laura and I are anguished by the brutal suffocation of George Floyd and disturbed by the injustice and fear that suffocate our country. Yet we have resisted the urge to speak out, because this is not the time for us to lecture. It is time for us to listen. It is time for America to examine our tragic failures — and as we do, we will also see some of our redeeming strengths.

It remains a shocking failure that many African Americans, especially young African American men, are harassed and threatened in their own country. It is a strength when protesters, protected by responsible law enforcement, march for a better future. This tragedy — in a long series of similar tragedies — raises a long overdue question: How do we end systemic racism in our society? The only way to see ourselves in a true light is to listen to the voices of so many who are hurting and grieving. Those who set out to silence those voices do not understand the meaning of America — or how it becomes a better place.

America's greatest challenge has long been to unite people of very different backgrounds into a single nation of justice and opportunity. The doctrine and habits of racial superiority, which once nearly split our country, still threaten our Union. The answers to American problems are found by living up to American ideals — to the fundamental truth that all human beings are created equal and endowed by God with certain rights. We have often underestimated how radical that quest really is, and how our cherished principles challenge systems of intended or assumed injustice. The heroes of America — from Frederick Douglass, to Harriet Tubman, to Abraham Lincoln, to Martin Luther King, Jr. — are heroes of unity. Their calling has never been for the fainthearted. They often revealed the nation's disturbing bigotry and exploitation — stains on our character sometimes difficult for the American majority to examine. We can only see the reality of America's need by seeing it through the eyes of the threatened, oppressed, and disenfranchised.

That is exactly where we now stand. Many doubt the justice of our country, and with good reason. Black people see the repeated violation of their rights without an urgent and adequate response from American institutions. We know that lasting justice will only come by peaceful means. Looting is not liberation, and destruction is not progress. But we also know that lasting peace in our communities requires truly equal justice. The rule of law ultimately depends on the fairness and legitimacy of the legal system. And achieving justice for all is the duty of all.

and compassion. There is a better way — the way of empathy, and shared commitment, and bold action, and a peace rooted in justice. I am confident that together, Americans will choose the better way.

Obama was not responsible for the racist reactions against him or other blacks. We are never responsible for those who react against us. This stuff stops when moral white people open their eyes, have hearts of empathy and realize the history of our nation and the fears that blacks live in daily. There is a lack of equality in justice and in everything else , and it's been there for 400 years.

REPLY

Why are we talking about Obama right now? Trump has been POTUS for 3 1/2 years. These aren't some new issues that just popped up. People voted for Trump bc he supposedly saw all of the issues that plagued our country & vowed to do something different. Instead, he focused on policies that would benefit himself & those who money can help him get reelected. And when those same unaddressed issues threaten to tear us apart, he continues to blame the black guy that served before him for his own shortcomings. It's time to wake up & smell the roses. Trump is great at stirring up grievance, but completely useless at doing anything to fix them.

Your beloved skinhead protesters, just last month, carried AK-47's into the Michigan State capital while breezily and openly talking of assassinating the governor. They didn't get labeled terrorists; didn't get ordered home; didn't get threatened by the PREZ with a few more broken skulls (in fact, called the wannabe death squads "great people"); and didn't get their guns seized (oh, forgot, those were for self-defense; well, same could be said for protesters who got a declaration of war from the White House). Inequal Justice is at the root of these protests – and is on display in the relative responses to each. I will await the death threats, the right's preferred form of civil discourse. This is categorically a LIE!

Don't take my word for it.

Take the word of Donald Trump's own Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Black Unemployment in 2010 during the worst point of the great Recession when Obama was president was 16.3%

Black unemployment in 2017 when President Obama left office was 7.8% for a total drop of 8.5% during his last 6 years as president.

Black Unemployment when Donald Trump took office was obviously 7.8%

Black Unemployment at the beginning of this year before the COVID-19 crisis was 5.8%

Total drop of 2%

Which is bigger?

an 8.5% drop or a 2% drop

Allow me to translate that for you since you Trump supporters struggle so much with numbers.

MORE African Americans found Employment (And Economic improvement in their lives) under President Obama than did under Trump .

By the way, Black Unemployment after THIS Friday's jobs report is going to be NORTH of 30%.
